Celebrity All-Stars Take the Ice for Charity Again in 1996

ike a Broadway show opening to rave reviews, the Celebrity All-Star Hockey Team has played to critical acclaim from sponsors, players, press and fans alike, and is expecting a continued long run. Formed with three goals in mind, to raise money for worthy causes, to promote the sport of hockey and to have fun, the Celebrity All-Star Hockey Team has already raised over four million dollars for charities in the United States and Canada in just over ten short years. In that time, the stars of the screen have easily become the ambassadors of hockey to fans old and new alike, bridging the gap between entertainment and sports.

The team, which features such notable entertainment personalities as "Friends" Matthew Perry, "Beverly Hills 90210's" Jason Priestley, "Spin City's" Michael J. Fox, "MacGyver's" Richard

Coulier, "Hope and Gloria's" Alan Thicke and Enrico Colantoni, "The Cape's" Cameron Bancroft and Adam Baldwin, "Clueless" star Rachel Blanchard, "Slapshot's" Jerry Houser, "ESPN's" John Saunders and many others, has been nicknamed everything from "hockey's ultimate pick-up hockey team" to the "coolest team on earth."

1986-87 marked the inaugural season for the Celebrity All-Star Hockey Team. The first stop in the 3-city tour was the Citizen America/North Star Classic played in Minnesota, which witnessed the All-Stars, led by a Michael J. Fox hat trick, defeat the North Stars Old Timers led by Bill Goldsworthy.

Second stop on the tour was a sellout at the Boston Garden, where the Celebrities skated against the Boston Bruin Leaends, led by Bobby Orr, Brad Park and Phil Esposito.

1990-91 saw the team venture to the great white north and draw nearly twenty thousand fans in one weekend. The trip marked the debut of "Wonder Years" star Jason Hervey, and the return of Matt Frewer (star of > "Doctor, Doctor" and the hit film "Honey, I Shrunk the Kids").

1992 started off with a bang as the Hollywood squad faced off against the gold-medal-winning 1980 USA Olympic Hockey team in Dallas. Richard Dean Anderson was traded to Team USA for that game and many of our regulars found themselves skating against their own teammates. Jim Craig, Mike Eruzione and Eric Strobel skated for the red, white and blue.

For 1992-93 the season included games in Milwaukee and Edmonton, > Rochester, St. Louis, Lake City, London and Ontario, raising money for Organ Donor Transplant Awareness in Milwaukee and for the Rainbow Society of Alberta. 1993-94 games were played in Charleston, SC and Hershey, PA for children's hospital charities.

In 1994-95 the team played in Los Angeles for the T.J. Martell Foundation, Salt Lake City, Milwaukee and in Boston for United Cerebral Palsy and Pediatric Aids. 1995-96 saw the team competing as part of the NHL's Breakout event in Los Angeles, against a team of NHL Alumni Legends in San Jose, a guest appearance at the NHL All-Star Game in Boston, and against the Flyers Alumni in Philadelphia, plus face off in an inter-squad clash in Los Angeles at the Great Western Forum.

1996-97 is shaping up to be as good as ever with games in Los Angeles, Minneapolis, Tucson and San Jose already scheduled, and more to be added.

The team continues its motto and mission, "To raise money for charity. To promote the sport of hockey. And to have fun." That's why the Celebrity All-Star Hockey Team is North America's "Ultimate Pick-Up Hockey Team."

The Movie / The Merchandise

"The Boys From Minnesota" is a feature film and concept that builds to its exciting climax amidst the uproar of the 1966 Minnesota State High School Hockey Tournament.

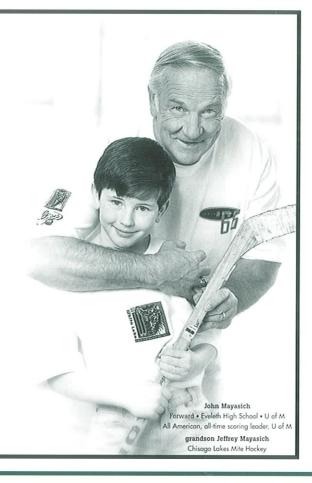

The Boys From Minnesota sportswear reflects the glamour of movie-making. The sportswear's quality and craftmanship is outstanding. Like our solid Midwestern values, it's the kind of quality associated with an earlier time. Yet it's timeless.

Just like the movie's hockey team, the fictional

White Lake Wolves, who stand for everything that hockey is:
friendship, community, spirit, tradition.

A portion of the proceeds of BFM merchandise sales will be directed to youth hockey in Minnesota. Call 612-975-5066 for more information
